Love Your Local Farmers' Markets!

Autumn is our in between season. At the outset it's hard to imagine being coaxed into the kitchen for some cozy baking project. We get our glorious September season, when it is still hot outside and the days are long, which provides golden opportunities to fit in everything we haven't yet done in the summertime. Enjoy those outdoor grill-fests, campout cooking, quick burrito beach days. But come late fall, that inevitable temptation to roast, simmer and bake away the chilly day returns. Even if you're using up those late-season tomatoes that stubbornly hang on the vine, it is likely they'll be headed for the chili pot instead of a fresh Caprese salad. And that's perfectly great. Maximize the seasonal shift, while teetering on the borderlands of summer and fall. Blurry lined autumn meals can have the most fantastic flavors of all. —Amber Turpin
